Its IPS-600 systems provide ideal performances, low consumption, silent movement and absence of vibration. The space is designed for more than six guests.

Volumes and surfaces dimensions of the project show an optimization of the indoor spaces with Italian design.

Their livability is easier thanks to the sliding doors, the rounded edges of the furniture's finishes, the linearity of the beds and the ease of the floors, with few steps and differences in height.

The night area includes three cabins for six guests. The fourth aft cabin can host both an expert sailor and a guest, thanks to the en suite toilet, the finish level, the livability of the spaces and the independence.

While the inner kitchen has a dishwasher, oven, cabinets for provisions and fridge with freezer (total 217 l), the living area offers a continuous sea landscape view. This area is separated from the galley with an electrical sliding glass.

In the outdoor spaces, there are three different sunbathing areas. An electrical privacy sunshade offers protection from prying eyes.

From a structural stairway, access to the fly area that hosts a main sofa with dining room table, a side sofa and a further sunbathing with three single reclining backrests, is available. In addition, the wet bar includes sink, BBQ grill, icemaker and fridge: a chance to use the outdoor space as a lunch area.

The comfort marks also the space for the captain, whose driving seats (internal and fly ones) can have the double adjustable and reclining seat.
